Research:

My work focuses on the neural plasticity responsible for and caused by chronic pain after peripheral nerve injury. I am particularly interested to dissect out the molecular pathways responsible for the development of neuropathic pain, to characterize the consequences of ongoing pain symptoms on other physiological systems such as sleep, and to try and develop novel strategies to promote recovery of both sensory and motor functions after peripheral nerve injury.

Publications:

